

Preface
Acknowledgements

Introduction

1. The Meaning of Meaning
Framing a theory of meaning
Magma
Signification and language
Signification and the first natural stratum
The radical imaginary
Meaning
Social imaginary significations
The unsayable
Qualitative distinctions
Conclusion

2. The Self
Introduction
A brief discussion about the word
Time and narrative
Embodiment
Social orientation
Webs of interlocation
Subject-referring properties
Corporeal limitations
Seeking the no-self
Other than good
Knowing and doing
Conclusion

3. The Subject
Introduction
For-itself
Living-being
The psyche
The social individual
Autonomy
Excursus on reality
Conclusion

4. Towards Modernity
The social-historical Modernity
Conclusion

5. Autonomy
Introduction
Mapping autonomy
Capitalism and autonomy
Relativizing autonomy
Conclusion

6. Reformulating the Project of Autonomy
Religion and autonomy
Cultural creativity
Creating meaning
Autonomy and meaning
Theory of action
Power and autonomy

Conclusion

Bibliography

Index